VINIFICATION

The destemmed grapes are gently transferred to the vats to preserve colour extraction and enhance aromas. A light cold skin maceration is carried out. The red Garnacha and Tempranillo are then bled separately. This phase enhances the primary aromas of the grapes, which give the Rosé a very fine and elegant nose. The musts obtained, which are very pale in colour, are fermented together at a low temperature (16°-18°C) in stainless steel tanks.

VINEYARDS & YIELDS

Selection of vines planted with red Garnacha on the highest slopes of our Rioja Alta village to provide finesse. The selected Tempranillo vines are located in the cooler parts of Cenicero and Rioja Alavesa.

SOILS

Mostly clayey-calcareous.

HARVESTING

Plot by plot, entirely by hand. Harvest in the early hours of the morning to preserve the cooler night temperatures. Transfer to the winery immediately to avoid oxidation and excess colour.

TOTAL TIME IN BARREL

It is not aged in oak barrels.

AGEING IN BOTTLE

It does not require any additional refining in the bottle, but is marketed and recommended to be tasted the younger it is to enjoy its greater freshness and vivacity, which are at their best in the first two years.
